Williams House
138 ~~238~~ Baltimore Pike
Bel Air
Private

This house is in a row of four all built around 1890. It distinguishes itself from its neighbors by being a smaller version of Bel Air's favorite house: the front gable house. This one is two bays wide, rather than three, and does not have the ell or back building the others do but proceeds directly to the kitchen addition. This house does prove the versatility of the style.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This small two story asphalt shingle with an ornamental gable in front (south) is at 238 Baltimore Pike in the Town of Bel Air, Harford County, Maryland. The ridge of its gable roof runs east and west. A round arched 1/1 double-hung sash window occupies the ornamental gable in the front (south) elevation. Originally the rest of the windows in front were the long 2/2. The one in the west bay of the first story (next to the door) still is. The two in the second story are new aluminum framed 1/1. The windows in the single bay side elevations (west and east) are 6/6. All are in plain surrounds painted green. The shingle is white. The front porch (south elevation) is carried on square posts with Tuscan capitals. There is a plain balustrade. A single bay, single story shed addition is in back (north). The windows are a pair of six pane casements. A shed porch with a lower roof line is behind that.

Parallel to the west elevation, front (south), is a flight of cement steps to the basement, guarded by a pipe balustrade.

This simple single pile with a shed kitchen is built in the same style as the more elegant houses on the east end of Broadway, but those middle class houses are double pile.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This little house was built on the corner of Hays and the Baltimore Pike in the Hays Addition on the west end of lots #19, 20, and 21 probably around 1885. Charles Dallam purchased those lots in that year from Will and George Hays. The next year the whole addition became the property of the Bel Air Land Company. This house and the next two east were probably built around the same time and probably soon after the purchase of the land. Although single piles, all three resemble the larger houses built on Broadway between 1875 and 1885. This house was owned by Alice R. Johnson (or Jackson) in 1920. It and the lot were assessed at $570.

This is a good example of a low to moderate income house in Bel Air in the latter part of the 19th century.
